Held at the Salomons Centre for Applied
Psychology in Tunbridge Wells, Kent

Les Greenberg will be delivering Level one Emotion–Focused Therapy (EFT) training in England for the first time, offering an exciting opportunity for delegates to learn directly from the primary originator and developer of this psychotherapeutic approach.

Emotion–Focused Therapy (EFT) is an empirically supported humanistic treatment that views emotions as centrally important in human functioning and therapeutic change. EFT involves a therapeutic style that combines both following and guiding the client's experiential process, emphasizing both relationship and intervention skills. Using two chair and empty chair approaches it helps support clients to work through 'blocks' and 'unfinished business' supporting the emergence of primary needs and letting go of unmet needs.

A substantial body of research outlining the effectiveness of EFT now exists in both individual and couples forms of therapy in a number of randomized clinical trials for difficulties including depression, anxiety, trauma and relationship distress (e.g. Elliott, Watson, Greenberg, Timulak & Freire, 2013; Johnson, Hunsley, Greenberg & Schindler, 1999).

LEVEL ONE PROGRAMME

This intensive four day training provides therapists with the skills they need to work more directly with emotions in psychotherapy. It covers major principles of emotional change in psychotherapy: awareness, expression, regulation, reflection, transformation, and corrective emotional experience. The training is experiential working on personal material, including brief lectures, video demonstrations, live modelling, case discussions and extensive supervised practice using your own experiences.
