Cathy is a family and commercial mediator. She currently manages Deal Mediation Services, who aim to empower people to sort their own problems and partners with the CCCU Mediation Clinic. She has conducted mediations with wide ranging experience of business, family and work place disputes.

Cathy has been involved in law for the past 21 years, having completed a law degree at King's College, London before qualifying as a solicitor in 2004. Prior to this she was a paralegal at Masons in London dealing with construction disputes. Accredited by the School of Psychotherapy and Counselling in Commercial Mediation (1997) and trained by ADR Group and Family Mediators Association in Family Mediation (2011), Cathy believes that, given the right assistance, it really is possible for most people to reach agreement between themselves without resorting to Court.
