Why MSc Applied Policing Practice?

20% Alumni discount

UK and EU Christ Church alumni are eligible for a 20% discount on self-funded Postgraduate Taught Masters and Masters by Research.

The MSc in Applied Policing Practice is offered to police officers and staff of all ranks and roles in related occupations. The demand on the police service is becoming increasingly more complex and the issues involved require a wider knowledge base and new skill sets to address them effectively. This programme supports students in developing their knowledge and their research interests.

Key to this programme is also leadership and management which is critical to the success of any police reform and local organisational change programme.

Our new programme will be based around building new postgraduate 'policing themes' that can be adapted to deliver the most contemporaneous issues in crime, policing and the CJS, and then, just as quickly, respond to new reforms or challenges that may confront the police/CJS in the future.

Who is the course for?

The completion of this programme is reliant on the ability to apply learning in the workplace. Therefore, this programme is aimed at serving police officers and staff with the relevant experience. Applications are welcome from all ranks and roles. The school has a growing number of police related PhD students should individuals require further study following completion of the MSc.

What will I study?

We are determined to make the new programme for and about the student's own place work and the occupational challenges they face within their own local context. Therefore, much of the study experience will be about reflective practice supported by theory and relevant academic input from us. We expect, then, that a significant amount of the study programme will be wrapped up through the delivery of four modules (dependent on which post graduate option the student chooses to take):

1. Policing in the organisation: Leadership, management, decision making and reform.

2. Research and evidence in policing: Evidence based policing, evaluation and the use of research in problem solving.
3. Action research and research methodology. These two modules will provide the opportunity to learn about different research approaches and using them in the workplace.
4. Year two will focus on the completion of a dissertation with one to one support from a supervisor. This will utilise the skills students glean from the research methods module and provide some useful local research for the force area.

What can I do next?

The application form is available here and needs to be sent to katie.pocock@canterbury.ac.uk We recommend that you complete your application as completely and as accurately as possible by the specified deadline. Use the personal statement section of the form to tell us why you think you would be a suitable candidate for the course and why you wish to pursue this degree. Please provide detail of previous higher education, NPC courses and applied learning.

You may be required to attend an interview, depending on the extent of your experience. The purpose of the interview will be to identify your suitability to study at level 7 and to provide you with an opportunity to ask questions about the programme.

Learning and Teaching

Much of this programme will be based on work based applied learning which will be completed locally in the student's own force area. However, students will be expected to attend some sessions at a central London location and at the University's campus in Canterbury over the course of the academic year. There will be four Study weekends (Friday and Saturday) that all students should try and attend: these are held at the University's main campus in Canterbury. You are also encouraged to attend Friday evening sessions the day before each of the Saturday teaching days. Although these are not compulsory they are designed to broaden your academic experience and to provide an opportunity for you to interact with other students on the programme. You should note that the registration session for the programme and the first teaching sessions will be in September 2017, the attendance of which is compulsory. It is important that you attend as many sessions as possible but you also need to recognise that studying for a degree requires considerable work in-between the sessions.

Studying at Masters Level requires a deep level of engagement with the subject area studied and a good level of individual preparation for seminars and assessed tasks. You will be given support and guidance but should not underestimate the work involved.

Assessment

The assessment pattern will vary from module to module. However, in general terms you may be required for example, to submit written assignments, do presentations, conduct a small piece of local research, write reflexive pieces on current practice and so on. If you complete the full MSc programme you will also be expected to complete a final dissertation at the end of year two.

If you chose to complete the other PG Certificate options you will be required to complete one module plus the research module depending on which pathway you prefer and all three first year modules for the PG Diploma option.

Research Environment

'We have an active research environment at CCCU should you decide to complete the full MSc programme. The programme is within the Canterbury Centre for Policing Research (CCPR) which hosted the CCPR lecture series, round table events and an annual conference.

Current police student projects include; policing and mental health, police training and education, police use of social media, police and volunteers, police and coping with stress, firearms, policing public order, policing and rape investigation and police and the use of translators in custody suites'.

Supervisors

The school has a number of active supervisors with various expertise in policing. The areas of interest include but are not exhaustive to: professionalism, police investigation, police education, police and technology, counter terrorism, neighbourhood policing, sexual violence, firearms, police legitimacy, evidence based policing and organisational justice.

FEES AND ADDITIONAL COSTS

Fees

2018/19 tuition fees for this course

	UK/EU	Overseas
Full-time	N/A	N/A
Part-time	£2,600	N/A

Tuition fees for all courses which last more than one academic year are payable on an annual basis, except where stated.

There will be an annual inflationary increase in tuition fees for this course where the course lasts more than one academic year. The increase will reflect cost inflation in the University. Any inflationary increase will be no more than 3.5% for each year of your study. The increase will be calculated on the previous year's tuition fees and not the tuition fees at the start of the course.

Government loans of up to £10,690 are available for some postgraduate Master's courses for students starting their course from 1 August 2018. Loans are subject to both personal and course eligibility criteria.

The rules around course eligibility mean that in some cases it may depend on how you are studying (full-time or part-time) as to whether you can apply for a postgraduate loan. To check whether your course is eligible, you can email the Student Fees Team or call 01227 923 948

Read more about postgraduate masters student loans.

Students may self-fund their course or a sponsor may fund or part-fund. Bursaries, scholarships and fee discounts may also be available.
